Market Commentary

Global financial markets experienced remarkable gains in November. Equities and fixed income stood out, driven by a shift in the market expectation favouring significant Federal Reserve rate cuts in 2024. The widespread depreciation of the US dollar played a pivotal role in driving the rally. Gold also rallied supported by falling Treasury yields, the weak US dollar and heightened geopolitical uncertainty arising from the Middle East crisis.

Outlook

As we approach 2024, our overall outlook is one of caution. While immediate rate cuts are not anticipated from policymakers, a shift towards monetary easing is predicted later in the coming year. Patience is once again recommended as we await potential opportunities that may arise with the onset of the recession and subsequent central bank interventions aimed at steering the economy back on course.
